

Fall is a great time to review the stewardship requirements and to make sure your monitoring and inspection reports are up-to-date!

Remember, once per calendar year each conservation easement property must be monitored and each conservation fee property inspected.

Conservation easement monitoring helps discover changes in land ownership, identify potential violations, and build relationships with the landowners. Annually inspecting conservation properties helps the land trust identify potential property ownership challenges.

To learn more about the monitoring requirements, the Alliance has several resources available on The Learning Center (make sure to log-in to The Learning Center before clicking on the links).

- Practice element 11C2
- Practice element 12C2

Questions? Please contact the Commission at info@landtrustaccreditation.org